rest of the party went back West last night at midnight, after seeing Lew Fields disport himself at his own theatre.

The sightseeing of the day was most quietly done. Early in the morning a man who owns a rubberneck stage line and was once a resident in "the Hills" came around to the Union Square Hotel and packed the whole crowd into one of his automobiles. He had them out for three hours, and there wasn't a tall building or a millionaire's house that was not pointed out. Their only comment was that it was certainly kind of New Yorkers to let them see so much of the town in so short a time, and none the town in so short a time, and none them could "ever say anything but worable words of the town after this." favorable words of the town after this. And never a one smiled when he said it. In the afternoon the crowd was taken through two newspaper offices and the nearly completed Hippodrome. Devil Dan Roberts (who is the mildest and kindliest faced person who has smiled his way along New York streets in many a day) inspected one or two New York boozoriums. It may be of interest to timorous persons who thought that the Bullock party was a desperate gang of carousing cutthroats to know that Mr. Roberts's only order was lithia water.

He also mentions many old friends and servants in a warm, personal way. The residue goes to his family, mostly nephews and nieces. The total value of the estate is estimated at $1,500,000.

The will is dated Jan. 28, 1899, and there are two codicils dated Feb. 13 and 14, 1905, just before Mr. Carter's death. Among the many legacies are these:
